The Big Store's Closing Sale.

You cannot muster money faster, than by anticipating your wants, in all classes of Dry Goods, for the next twelve months, and promptly buying a supply to meet such wants at our great CLOSING SALE. The marked inducements held out, in the character, quality and prices of the goods, is attracting buyers from both town and country.

We are not replenishing the stock, neither could we do so at the prices, we are selling at by retail, which are less than manufacturer's cost, hence it is important for those who want to save money, to make their purchases promptly.

CLIMBING UPWARDS.

The Wheat Markets at Liverpool and Chicago Showed some Improvement The Latest Prices.

Yesterday's storm interfered with telegraphic communication, and the American market today, and Chicago news was scarce. The most consistent view, however, is that the Liverpool market is steadily higher. This month's delivery appreciated 10 cents, and the American market advanced 10 to 15 cents per bushel. The Liverpool market is 10 to 15 cents higher, and the American market is 10 to 15 cents lower.

Weak and Run Down, With Heart and Kidneys in Bad Condition—Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I was very much run down, having been sick for several months. I had been trying different remedies which did me no good. I would have severe spells of coughing that would leave me prostrate. I was told that my kidneys were affected, and my heart and kidneys were in a bad condition. In fact, it seemed as though every organ was out of order. I felt that something must be done and my brother advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I procured a bottle and began taking it. Before it was half gone I felt that it was helping me. I continued its use and it has made me a new man. I am now strong, healthy, and full of life. I feel that I owe my recovery to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is the best—In fact the one True Blood Purifier. Sold by all druggists. $1.50 per bottle."

PROBABLY THE WORST PUN OF THE CENTURY.

On the 9th of November, 1837, the year of her accession, the Queen went in state with her brother—Monarch, the King of Great Britain. The day was a general holiday, and the streets all along the course of the splendid procession were lined with people hailing the monarch with shouts and waving hats and handkerchiefs. It was on this day that Lord Alderman made the pun of the century, and it was due to him, "I wonder if my good people of London are as glad to see me as I am to see them?" He replied by pointing to the letters "L" and "D" on the decorations, etc., and saying: "Your Majesty, can see their loyal Cockney snapper—'Ye Are!' If any knows a word of Cockney, become permanent, he can publish it in the 'Star'."—Montreal Star.

GREAT OLD AGE.

An authenticated case of longevity comes from the Russian town of Khatkoff—the case of an old soldier 118 years of age. He served in the Caucasus in military service for seventy-five years, fought against the Persians, was several times wounded and twice a prisoner. With the assistance of a Russian girl he effected his escape from jail, and out of gratitude married her. But she died eighty years ago. This wonderful old man has the appearance of a man of fifty. He has still a good head of hair, and his eyesight is excellent—so excellent that he can still handle a rifle with effect. He has been hunting. He has been a total abstemious all his life from alcohol and tobacco, and has always been a moderate eater. Fifty years ago he disappeared for a year, but he returned safe and sound to say that he had been on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem and other holy places.

An Afflicted Mother.

NURSING HER DYING CHILD HER HEALTH GAVE WAY.

ANÆMIA, FOLLOWED BY NEURALGIC PAINS, BROKE HER SYSTEM—HER HUSBAND FEARED THAT SHE COULD NOT RECOVER.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Diehl, who live about one and a half miles from Bridgewater, are highly esteemed by all who know them. Mrs. Diehl has passed through a trying illness, the particulars of which she recently gave a reporter a very interesting and instructive account. It was in the spring of 1899 my health gave way. In addition to my ordinary household duties I had a sick child. In the hope of saving my little one, it did not occur to me that overwork was doing me harm. I was exhausting my strength. Finally my child passed away, and then I realized my physical condition. Shortly after this I was afflicted with neuralgic pains in the shoulder which shifted to my right side after three weeks and settled there. One day and night of a sick child. In the hope of saving my little one, it did not occur to me that overwork was doing me harm. I was exhausting my strength. Finally my child passed away, and then I realized my physical condition. 52 BOILS

"Three years ago I was troubled with boils, and tried several remedies recommended by friends, but they were of no avail. I had FIFTY-TWO BOILS in all, and found nothing to give me relief until I tried BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. The first bottle I took made a complete cure and proved so very satisfactory that I have recommended B.B.B. to many of my friends who have used it with good results." A. J. MUSTARD, Hyder, Man.

Gladstone's Deeds and Endings.

Mr. Gladstone began as the defender of the Irish church; he ended by demolishing it. No one ever opposed more valiantly the extension of British influence in Egypt, but it was under his government we bombarded the Alexandrian forts, fought the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and reduced Egypt to the condition of a British satellite. He was the most conspicuous advocate of peace with Russia when Lord Beaconsfield was in office, until Constantinople was in danger. Five years later he left office, after having brought us to the verge of war with Russia for the sake of Pundich. One year he clapped Mr. Parrell into prison, the next he proposed to make over to him the government of Ireland, and then again he disposed him from the leadership. Yet he was always circumvent and anxious, for his consistency. Circumstances alter cases, and Mr. Gladstone was not above being taught by events.—W. T. Stead in Review of Reviews.

BREAKING THE NEWS

"Do you think he'll take it very badly, Nora?" Nora Helmsley shrugged her shoulders.

"My dear Betty, you ought to know more about Mr. Markham's powers of endurance than I."

"But what do you think he'll do? What do you suppose?"

"Why waste our time in supposition? He'll be here most likely this afternoon, and you will be able to judge for yourself."

Betty Oakhurst sprang to her feet. "Ted is coming here this afternoon? Why on earth didn't you tell me before?"

"I don't see that at all," returned Betty quietly as she drew away from her companion. "I am sure that if—"

"You pained tentatively. "You don't mean to say that you expect me to tell Ned Markham that you've jilted him?"

"I certainly don't expect you to put it in that way," replied Miss Oakhurst, with a little laugh, "but I am quite certain that you would explain it to your fellow man better than any one else."

"Explains!" exclaimed Nora impatiently. "I don't know that there's anything to explain except that you've put yourself and me in the most ridiculous position."

"Nora!"

"I wish I'd never had anything to do with it. I never felt so uncomfortable in my life as I have done since you dragged me into this precious scheme of yours."

"Poor old Nora!" murmured Betty sympathetically while she cast furtive glances at the clock.

"You came here and shed any number of tears, and then you advised Ted Markham; that your father would not hear of an engagement, but that if you only had a little time before you were sure everything would come right."

"So it has," remarked Betty sotto voce. "It's only a question of time of view."

Nora flashed an adroit look at her. "You are, indeed, a very serious woman, and at least pretend to be so," she said to herself. "You begged me to help you to get my aunt to ask him here, to act as screen in fact, so that your people might imagine it was all over and that you had changed your mind, and now—"

The sound of a bell broke in upon Miss Helmsley's eloquence, and Betty caught up her gloves.

"In any case, my dear Nora, those me as much as you like. Goodbye."

And before Nora could stop her she had darted through the door and was on her way down stairs. She let her go. After all, it never was of any use to argue with Betty. She was so sure of herself. You begged me to help you to get my aunt to ask him here, to act as screen in fact, so that your people might imagine it was all over and that you had changed your mind, and now—"

tered him and listened in silence while she rattled on. Suddenly she stopped, conscious of his fixed glance.

"Anything the matter?" she asked in a low, earnest voice. It was hardly possible that he could already have learned Betty's treachery.

"Yes. We can't go on like this, Miss Helmsley."

"No!" Nora felt the color go out of her face.

"It isn't fair to you, and besides I—things have changed."

"You mean that Betty?"

"Miss Oakhurst is going to be married. I am grieved, but I don't speak."

"She is engaged to Lord Bathurst. I am grieved, but I don't speak."

"I am very sorry," she began hesitatingly. "I am afraid I was rather to blame. But I thought Betty really loved you."

"She left the sentence unfinished. Ted Markham's demeanor puzzled her. He was quite white, and there was a look in his eyes which troubled her."

"I think of going to have a look at the antiques. My father has some interest, and I hope to get sent off to Melbourne."

"But haven't you made up your mind rather hurriedly?" she objected timidly.

"Hurriedly? Why, I put things in three weeks ago!"

"Weeks ago?" she exclaimed. "But Betty's engagement is quite fresh. Did you suspect?"

"I suspected nothing. I knew."

"You knew?" she exclaimed indignantly. "How could you know?"

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you?" She stared at him, his tone so so vehement. "Oh, about Betty, you mean?"

"Of course. What else could I mean?"

"Nothing, of course."

"Really, I don't understand you."

"He laughed drearily as he rose. "No, I must not explain. Goodbye."

She looked up at him with startled eyes.

"You are too hard on Betty. She!"

"On Betty? Don't you know that I haven't thought of her for weeks—that I found out long ago that she had made a mistake?"

Paine's Celery Compound Can Restore You.

'Tis Folly and Madness to Defer the Use of the Great Medicine.

"I am tired and weary of this continual life of misery and suffering. This is the heart of thousands of poor nervous and sleepless men and women crazed with headache, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia and blood troubles. Such people are everywhere, filled with gloom and despondency, memory fails, and they are often found on the straight path that leads to the dark grave."

Have courage, suffering brother and sister. Paine's Celery Compound has cured thousands of cases in the past far more desperate and terrible than yours. It has paved an agent of life to others, and it will certainly do as much for you in this your time of adversity and distress."

What will your decision be suffering? Will you allow the many symptoms of disease and death to more fully develop on you, will you, by the aid of nature's medicine, Paine's Celery Compound, strike just now at the root of your trouble and be made sound, healthy and happy?"

The able physicians admit that Paine's Celery Compound is the only true nerve food and medicine that has ever been given to suffering humanity. It strengthens and builds up the nerves, tissues and muscles. It purifies the life stream, casts out disease of every form, giving a fresh existence and long happy life. A trial of one bottle will convince you that Paine's Celery Compound is a life-saver and a disease banisher."

BACTERIA IN MILK.

Some Kinds Are Dangerous, While Others Are Harmless.

If we were to measure the extent of pollution of different substances according to the number of bacteria they contain, writes Professor H. S. Russell, milk would be almost the worst food we could use, for, as a rule, a drop of milk, as we drink it at our meals, contains more bacteria than an equal volume of sewage.

As a rule, the supply that would contain a fraction of what is ordinarily found in milk would in most cases be considered unwholesome not on account of the mere numbers that it contains, but in the light of what such a condition means. A water supply containing thousands of thousands of organisms per drop is unsatisfactory, because it indicates indirectly the presence of organic matter in abnormally large amounts, and such material is undesirable in water. In milk, on the other hand, it would not be interpreted in the same way, because normally milk contains organic matter that would support such growth.

Even under the most favorable conditions milk contains many more bacteria than water ordinarily does. As it comes from the animal it generally has from 1,000,000 germs per drop. These in the milk are multiplied on account of the favorable conditions of growth, so that with increasing age the germ content is greatly increased until in commercial market milk there are frequently millions even of billions.

The character of the bacteria in any milk is of vastly more importance than the presence of mere numbers. Ordinarily the great majority of the contained organisms are harmless, but their effect on the human system is concerned. They are the kinds that cause the various fermentations to which milk is peculiarly subject.

Not infrequently certain bacteria gain access to the milk that are able to form deleterious substances. Cholera infantum and other disorders of the intestines are frequently attributable to this effect. The presence of a few of these organisms of this class is very much more dangerous than the millions of saprophytes that are concerned in the production of the various fermentative changes.

Keep Flies From the Milk.

One of the troubles of the dairy farm, and, in fact, at the creameries and the factories, says Mr. W. F. Paine, is the ever present nuisance of the fly, which is more accentuated during the summer months. Flies will get into the milk buckets and milk cans if special precautions are not adopted to exclude them.

At the creameries and factories the receiving vat stands open and affords ample opportunities for flies to perpetrate suicide. With our advanced knowledge of dairy and other bacteriology we are now aware that this element forms a distinct menace to the purity of our dairy products. Dr. Schultz, the eminent bacteriologist of Berlin, has submitted thousands of flies to microscopic examination, and his results and conclusions are simply surprising. The fly's foot is a sucking tube, the mouth of a trumpet. The circular portion secures a grip on a flattened surface. The vacuum being complete, seeing the trumpet shaped foot is hollow, a firm hold is thus secured, and the fly will walk up the perpendicular pane of glass as readily as it can travel over any lying horizontal.

In the hollowed portion of the trumpet shaped foot is a space which forms a receptacle for bacterial life. The doctor found no colonies in the feet of about 50 per cent of flies caught in the country and in the city about 40 per cent. In the hollow of one foot alone he discovered over 100 microbes. It is known that the fly will walk up over and round in filth, dirt, dead flesh and other vile matter. The foot retains the objectionable germ life, which is the cause of putrefaction. On getting into the milk they convey it, or inoculate it with a hostile element which tends to affect flavor and aroma detrimentally. We should seriously guard against this evil and freely recognize the importance of keeping the flies out of the milk or cream.—Exchange.

Bad Flavors in Milk.

Under the auspices of the Stewartry Dairy association Mr. Kirk, Craigiepool, delivered a notable lecture on the subject of bad flavors in milk. The North British Agriculturist. The main argument of the lecture was that bad flavors in cheese were the inevitable result of dirt which had been introduced into the milk either directly through a want of sufficient cleanliness in handling the milk or indirectly through the cows drinking dirty water or eating contaminated food.

Dirty buildings, dirty milks, dirty milks, dirty dishes and dirty water supplies, argued Mr. Kirk, were the causes which produced a prolific crop of bad flavors in cheese. Flavors in milk, whether good or bad, were, he said, as germs, as they were due to bacterial organisms. Flith of any sort was the one and only breeding ground of the malig bacteria producing bad flavors in milk.

It is well known that it follows that the whether good or bad, were, he said, as germs, as they were due to bacterial organisms. Flith of any sort was the one and only breeding ground of the malig bacteria producing bad flavors in milk.

MILBURN'S HEART & NERVE PILLS

Mrs. Alexander Beller, of Pigeon Bluff, Man., writes an account of her case as follows: "I have great pleasure in giving my experience of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. For about ten years I was troubled with a shaking and fluttering of the heart. I tried five doctors and several remedies but none of them did me much good. Lately I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and bought two boxes. Before I started using them I could not do my house work and gave myself up to die, as I thought I would never be cured. Now I feel lively and splendid since taking the pills, do my work, enjoy my meals and feel as if I had found something in life worth living for."

Now and then a man gets a good thing and does not know it. An instance is noted by Sir M. Grant Duff in his "Diary."

We began to talk about the fog. "It was so bad," I said, "a week or two ago that I hear Farrar preached against it at Magdalen."

"It was at that church," my friend answered, "that a clergyman, denouncing Mr. Toth, the ritualist, said, 'I will not name him, but his name is in everybody's mouth. Then, seeing the smiles on the faces of his congregation, he turned scarlet.'"

Deseronto, Ont., August 9th, 1898

Owing to the Rathbun Company having decided to wind up their Big Store business, I beg to advise you that I intend carrying on the ordered clothing trade, on my own account, at the old quarters, in the Oliver block, Main Street, where I hope to meet all my old customers and all others who can appreciate up-to-date methods and a business like desire to give them value for their money.

The stock will be new and fresh, comprising all the latest novelties in English, French and Canadian Tweeds and cloths. We feel assured, that in design, quality and variety, it will appeal to the taste and intelligence of the most exacting.

Our facilities for manufacturing will be such that every customer may rely on prompt and satisfactory treatment.

Reflecting on past experience, we have decided to adopt a "strictly cash system," trusting that all may realize that this course will prove to the advantage of all concerned.

Respectfully Yours,

W.M. STODDART.

Baker, law office; Alexander and Co., private bank; Macdonald, hotel; and private dwelling combined; B. Egan, hardware; C. W. Barkwell, fruit store; John Moore, tailor; Geo. Scott, harness shop; R. F. Hatching, block; J. T. Reid, insurance agent. All were insured for less than $100,000.

A STRANGE ENTERPRISE.

Of all the strange enterprises to be found in operation that of raising foxes is, perhaps, the most unique. Class Cole and his wife are the sole inhabitants of the Main Duck, a fine place to live in the summer, but a desolate, dreary place in winter, where the only companionship to be found are the studies of departed men who have gone to Davy Jones' locker in that vicinity. Mr. Cole farms a little and he acquires two deer, intending them for breeding purposes, but one fine day both deer took to the water and swam ashore. Last spring he turned loose fifteen more and they have thrived and grown sleek and fat. The foxes live well on wild ducks and other fowl. Mr. Cole expects to have a large herd of foxes next spring.—Whig.

IN THE SOUDAN.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—A despatch to the Cologne Gazette from St. Petersburg says it is regarded as possible, in the light of recent information, that not only the French expedition under Major Marchand, but a force of Abyssinian troops is at Fashoda. It is stated that King Menelek will refuse to relinquish his old claim to the Nile border of his empire, and accordingly may plant his flag and assemble a considerable force of troops opposite Fashoda.

Cairo, Sept. 25.—General Kitchener, commanding the Anglo-Egyptian expedition, has returned to Omdurman having established posts at Fashoda and on the Sobat river. The troops did no fighting except with a derelict steamer on the way south, which was captured.

Sunkin, Sept. 25.—The only organized remnant of the Khalifa's army was defeated on Sept. 22, after three hours' hard fighting, when an Egyptian force, numbering 1,300, under command of Colonel Parsons, routed 3,000 dervishes of whom 500 were killed. Three Egyptian officers were wounded and 37 Egyptian soldiers killed and 50 wounded.

London, Sept. 25.—It is reported that the War Office has granted the Twenty-first Infantry a short furlough in recognition of its bravery at Omdurman. Otherwise the regiment would have gone direct from Egypt to India for a few years' stay, a contingent composed of all branches of the military service are making arrangements to present the regiment with a gold shield commemorative of its famous charge at Omdurman.

Spanish Peace Commissioners Instructed to Fight Hard for Them.

Madrid, Sept. 28.—The Cabinet last evening had under discussion Captain-General Blanco's despatch concerning the American claims in connection with the evacuation of Cuba. D. Nolasco de Rio, Minister of Foreign Affairs, states that the Spanish Peace Commissioners have been instructed to contend strongly for the integrity of Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines.

Should the United States press too exacting than is expected, the commissioners have power to make all possible concessions, political and commercial, compatible with the retention of Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines, but in the event of losing a portion of the islands, they are instructed to resist to the utmost an attempt of the United States to claim the right of preference over other powers should Spain desire to sell or cede the remainder of the islands. It is understood, however, that all instructions to the only ad referendum. Most of the commissioners and attaches speak English.

MR. CALDER RENOMINATED.

Mr. Whitney's Careless Attitude Regarding the Gentlemen's Unseating.

Whitby, Sept. 28.—Mr. Charles Calder, ex-M.P.P., was again nominated by the Conservatives of South Ontario at a public meeting held in the town hall here yesterday afternoon. Mr. Whitney believes that South Ontario will be the pivotal point of the bye-elections, and the meeting was largely attended. The feature of the Conservative leader's address was the imputation that the Liberal was backed by a Greek conspiracy. He also made his first public statement on the constable case since the decision of the Court of Appeal was made public, as good as promised that Mr. Calder should be the Conservative Minister of Agriculture on the success of that party.

The meeting was largely attended. When it began there were not more than one hundred voters present, with a scattering of ladies in the gallery, but the electors struggled in during the delivery of the address, and at the close of the meeting the hall was comfortably filled.

SIR JOHN ALLEN DEAD.

Ex-Chief Justice of New Brunswick Passes Away.

Fredericton, N.B., Sept. 28.—Sir John C. Allen, ex-Chief Justice of New Brunswick, died at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

He was made judge of the Supreme Court in 1867, which position he held until 1875, when he was appointed Chief Justice.

Twisted the Lion's Tail.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 28.—William Roelker, a German iron worker, twisted a lion's tail yesterday at Eads, Mo., and will lose his left arm. Hummel's circus was giving an exhibition. Among the animals were a pair of African lions. The male was lying at the front of the cage with one of his paws and his tail hanging outside the bars. Roelker began stroking the paw with his left hand. The lion watched Roelker's procedure. Then the iron worker grabbed the tail with his right hand, giving it a sharp twist. There was a roar and one of the lion's paw caught Roelker by the left shoulder and stripped off the flesh of the arm down to the hand, two fingers of which were torn off.

Another Shooting Fatality.

Georgetown, Sept. 28.—A very and accident occurred here Saturday, resulting in the death of Mr. Jefferson Biscoy. Mr. Biscoy, in company with two companions, went on a shooting expedition, and on emerging from the woods in the evening, they proceeded to unload their guns. One of the party, David Toast, discharged the contents of one barrel into Mr. Biscoy's leg, tearing the flesh, and fracturing the bone, and so that he died of the wound a few hours later. Mr. Biscoy was buried yesterday afternoon with military honors, he being a member of the 30th Lorne Rifle.

Serious Accident Near Cornwall.

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 28.—A chain broke on one of Manning & McDonald's dredges, which are at work on the steamboat channel of the Lawrence River near Stanley Island, yesterday, and the dredge and struck one of the hands, Thomas Craig, across the face, inflicting injuries which may prove fatal. The unfortunate young man's face was smashed almost to a jelly, his nose was broken and both the jaw and the jaw bone received a compound fracture.

Shelburne Perjury Case.

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 28.—The Shelburne perjury case reached at the Assize Court here yesterday, and is now in progress. The evidence is almost identical with that given in the first trial. Cordingley v. Gummerson, an action for breach of promise, was tried. Verdict for the plaintiff, $300 damages; writ of habeas corpus was issued at 9:30 a.m. to-day.

Lafayette Probably Innocent.

Three Rivers, Que., Sept. 28.—Frank Lafontaine, charged with attempting to pass a ten dollar Dominion bank bill, known to be counterfeit, was acquitted for trial yesterday afternoon. It appears he was only a victim and in trying to get rid of the bill he was deceived by a well-to-do farmer of Genthiev, near here, and evidence which he will bring up in rebuttal it is thought will clear him.

Observatory Magneto Moved.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—The magneto instruments used in the Observatory, Queen's Park, have been in the working order, owing to trolley and other wires, to overcome which they were raised to the top of the dome and finally set up at Algonquin, where, in the center of a four-acre field, they will in future be more deservingly the weather man.

The Hampshire Gazette of Northampton, Mass., has a long account of the residence of Private H. A. Miller, a gallant Deseronto lad, son of S. Hampton Miller formerly of Deseronto, now residing at Northampton. Private Miller was connected with the 2nd Massachusetts regiment of volunteers in the late campaign. The Gazette says:

"Private Herbert A. Miller of Company I, 2nd Mass. Volunteers, took care of sick comrades, and came home, was seen by a Gazette reporter soon after his arrival. Glad as his friends were to hear of him, Miller says it is nothing in comparison with his thankfulness to be at home again. Private Miller, a volunteer, to remain behind, showed a courage, devotion and spirit of self-sacrifice equaling that of the Roman soldiers and sons of Sparta of old. In some respects, it was a greater exhibition of courage than that of the hero of the battle of Gettysburg. Miller, who had been in the front of the cannon's mouth, acquired to face the cannon's mouth. It comes to the Gazette, not from Private Miller, but from the lips of another, that Col. Clark ordered Captain Williams to detail a man from his company to remain and assist in looking after the wounded. Captain Williams indicated. He told the colonel that he never yet had refused to obey any of his orders, but in this instance he did not feel that he could order any of his men to stay behind, all of whom were more or less ill, but he said he would for some one else volunteer. When Miller was asked he replied, 'Why, Captain! I want to go home with the rest of my boys, but I can't go, but I can't come back, and said, 'Captain! I will remain.'"

In reply to the question of the reporter as to who was the volunteer, the regiment called for home, Miller said they went away down. He felt very homesick, and there was a feeling that he would like to go home. But the stern necessity of caring for the sick did not allow of faltering. He was best able, physically, of any to remain behind, and felt it was his duty to do it. For several days he assisted in nursing, when he himself became sick, and he had to be cared for. He was taken down with yellow fever, but it was a light run. The men detailed from the company at that time, to remain behind, but one of them died.

The lack of food at first was the cause of a great deal of illness. Many of the men, the hungry, could not restrain themselves from eating mangoes. He thinks the eating of them caused the death of many. He says they could not find anything to eat. But of proper medicine was also sadly felt. Quinine was given for everything. Miller says the worst thing in that climate is to use tobacco or whiskey. He believes the effects from either proves, in most instances, fatal.

CONTENTMENT.

Within the confines of this little room, where narrow space has held my hopes and fears.

For what matters it how many years, (and a garden in perennial bloom) There's not an angle nor a corner small, There's not an object—picture, print nor vase.

There's not a hand's breadth span upon it, well, And welcome not to memory 'neath my feet.

And like a garden when the sunshine plays No fairer pleasure can reflect her rays. And though when gloom and mirth pervade I know

These earthly beauties of my garden fade, Where is it when I wander. When all is said, I do not exclaim my realm for aught below.

—J. W. SCHWARTZ in "The Review."

A MODERN OFFER.

"For some time," observed Mr. Markham, "I have been haunted by the idea of proposing to you."

"And why have you not?"

"I have been at times half afraid that you might answer," replied the candid young man. "At others," he added, thoughtfully, "I have been almost invisible dust speck from my sleeve, I have been much perturbed by the possibility—oh, certainly, the possibility—that you might refuse."

"It would be disagreeable to be refused," remarked the lady impersonally.

"That," the gentleman considered, "depend on it, it would unquestionably be disagreeable to be refused."

"You are not sure whether you are in love with me or not?" remarked the young lady.

Mr. Markham readjusted his back to the mantelpiece and said in a low voice, looking down at the very adjacent brown, bent head:

"I admit I am disappointed. I had no idea that you could be stupid. It is evidently possible."

From the motion of Miss Greatorex's head—as they would say in the old books—he implied a note of interrogation.

"It is stupid not to have grasped the question. I have for quite a long time known that I was in love with you."

"Ever since luncheon?"

"Perhaps not quite so long as that. But certainly ever since, almost ever since, Lady Greatorex left the room."

The young lady laughed.

"Was my mother such an instance of George Eliot's malign prophet standing behind her daughter and threatening what she will be?"

"I merely meant that the presence of a chaperon is incompatible with sentiment."

"I observed the young woman, 'do not mind admitting that I am getting confused. You now assert that for more than 20 minutes you have adored me.' (Mr. Markham's shoulders appeared to depreciate the exaggeration of this rhetoric.) 'At the moment ago you seemed anxious to do better than I do.'

"Not at all. That is why I lately called you stupid. I am sure that I am in love, but I am very uncertain as to whether I would like to marry the belle of the ball."

Miss Greatorex laughed.

"I admit it sounds perhaps improper. I merely mean that marriage is the necessary denouement of being what is called in love seems to me quite a doubtful expedient."

"When there is no question of being in love," he continued, relaxing himself by a short walk to the other end of the room and back, "I think marriage is not a bad arrangement. It is then merely a form of business partnership, and now that it has ceased to be inculcated has no special terrors. But you and I have nothing to gain by that. I am exceedingly well off as you are. I do not need to marry for position, nor do you. We neither of us need to demand blood like Hamlet's aunt. In this, as they say in the 'Arabian Nights,' you have nothing to gain by me, and I have no material need of anything you can supply to me. Markham is just as fine a place as me. Greatorex Abbey, and not a bit finer. When I speak of being in love, it is purely a personal sensation. I should like to be chronic. I really enjoy being in love. But if we got married—"

"You cannot anticipate your love standing that crucial test?"

"I honestly admit that I have my doubts. We live in a straightforward age. Let me make a clean breast of them."

"You mean that you would dislike the duty of being permanently in love with me," said the young lady, who perhaps found his remarks becoming too general, "though as a temporary sentimental excursion you have not hitherto found it disagreeable?"

"When I did fault with us," he declared, without very directly replying to her question, "that unless one were to marry you one could not do several things one would like. For instance, I would like very much to take you to India."

"When?" inquired the young lady, with somewhat startling definiteness.

"Not," he replied, "till, say October. India is the middle of the season; you would not enjoy it, but I fear I shall, unless we do get married, the trip is impossible. All the same, I should like to explain the Taj to you, and Shah Alim's mosque at Agra. However, oh, the Golden Gates at San Francisco! It is true that I cannot take you there without marrying you."

"You could take mamma as well, and Aunt Adelaide."

"That would be different. A superior plan for those to whom it commends itself, but personally I should not like it so much."

Miss Greatorex laughed. Mr. Markham left his sequestered seat and took one beside her on the little sofa.

"Were you, thinking," asked the lady, "that you would like to take my hand?"

"I have thought that before. I was thinking of taking it. Now, if we were and no is a peer. It is better than anything I could have offered you."

There was a slight smile behind her. "Here," she replied, the young man, looking over her head to the suddenly opened door, "comes Lord Mendip himself to receive my congratulations in person."

Miss Greatorex leaped to her feet. "Don't, for heaven's sake, do it!" she cried. "I am sure you will not do it. I did it to see if I could do it for you."

Lord Mendip smiled forward. "I am sure you will not do it. I did it to see if I could do it for you."

TALE OF A TIARA.

"My dearest Hermione!" looked up from her morning correspondence. Her air was one of profound abstraction, and she commenced to sugar my coffee with quite uncalled for generosity.

"It is altogether too bad," she exclaimed, as I resumed my cup with the fifth lump suspended above it. She took no notice even when the sugar flapped into the marmalade, and her forehead was puckered into a frown.

"What is it?" I said, sitting down and setting my paper afresh.

"Oh, here is a letter from May Vere. She has just been present on her father-in-law, a diamond tiara, and she says—this rather doubtfully—that it is quite the best of the whole lot. She will wear it first at the duchess's reception."

"That makes the sixth tiara in the family, doesn't it?" "My dear Vere is my wife's cousin."

"I suppose so—if you say so."

"I was frankly more interested for the moment in the money market column than in May Vere's latest present. There followed a longish pause. Hermione rattled the teaspoons and made much of the cat. Then her voice came to me across the table decorations with just a touch of fretfulness:

"Jack!" "I'm!" "I should look so nice in a tiara, Jack."

I tossed the paper on to an armchair. Although we have been married three years that particular infection in my wife's tones never fails to arouse my curiosity, and—well, something else.

"If I were only rich enough!" I began before she had time to answer. "Oh, Jack, I didn't mean that. I am not so mean as to reproach you. We have really everything that is necessary. A tiara can be done without. I couldn't have the first and now, I have five or six, and May Vere's looks anything but plain in hers, however beautiful it is. But still—well, what I meant was that it seems almost a misfortune that I should look so nice in one—having one's first and now, I have five or six."

"I don't see that," I said, "I would rather have you as you are."

"May is generally acknowledged as plain."

"I wasn't comparing you with her. It would be absurd."

"Would it?" smiled Hermione. And I am not yet proof against Hermione's smiles. So in sport I suggested something to her which had occurred to me—just a joke, and no more. I knew she would act on it if I were dreamed of for a moment. Yet Hermione still declares all that followed was entirely my fault, and that but for me she would not have to suffer the prolonged agony of being the only girl out of seven married cousins unable to boast a diamond tiara among her possessions.

We had several engagements the week of the duchess's reception, but that was the first and was very generally considered the most important. It also happened to be very busy just then. I rather expected a bad quarter of an hour when I told Hermione how absolutely impossible it would be for me to do more than just look in at a late hour, but, as is often the case where she is concerned, my anticipations were not fulfilled.

She smiled at me very sweetly, said she could find plenty of people to go with and that I need not worry on her account, and I fancied I detected signs of relief in her expression, which may have been only an unusual smile for my voice. "And have you heard her tale of the tiara?" "What fun she is, isn't she?" "The principal topic of conversation."

More than one man patted me on the back and congratulated me anew. I felt myself, generally speaking, quite as lucky as they thought me, for I admire her, too, but I could not help wondering how they would have liked participating in my present anxiety on her behalf.

Hermione just doesn't mind what she does. A candid girl friend had said to me before our marriage, and once or twice I have been forced to agree with her, for if my suspicions were correct and this tale appeared in print, I would be to reach the ears of my next-door neighbor, who I knew to be present, having seen him, what could be the unfortunate result I failed to consider.

Lord Curran is best described as one of the old school. His ideas about women Hermione calls "peculiar to the least of it." They certainly are not of the present day, but date back to the times when women couched themselves

"But I thought of what I had to tell her—of Lord Curran's orders—and I was in the line of my justifiable agitation. I am in the midst of my justifiable agitation."

FIRE AND FLOODS

KEROSENE SPRAYING.

Recommended as Summer Treatment For San Jose Scale.

Pure kerosene as a destructive agent to insects is just the thing, but results with its use have been so conflicting as to make many hesitate to try it.

After a long and careful investigation, however, has led Professor William B. Alwood of the Virginia station to the conclusion that pure kerosene can be safely used upon all our fruit trees in the dormant season and with proper precautions during the growing season also.

The chief point to be observed in its application is the proper atomization of the kerosene. Unless it is applied in a finely atomized condition and in quantity so as to just moisten the parts of the plant there is danger.

The skill and judgment necessary to insure safety in this work are not such as to preclude the use of kerosene by fruit growers; hence we recommend it as a summer treatment for San Jose scale.

The machinery which Professor Alwood has found best suited to this work, so far as safety to the plant is concerned, is the atomizer.

There are several styles on the market, but the essential principle is the same—viz., the delivery by a bellows or a syringe-like apparatus of a strong blast of air across a tube which extends to the bottom of a cistern or can, fast at the other extremity of the apparatus.

By the action of this blast the air is rarefied in the tube, which causes the oil to rise to the top of the tube where it is blown into an extremely fine spray.

The greatest obstacle to the use of this apparatus is its small capacity, but as it is yet true in most cases that the scale is confined to small areas, this is not a serious drawback.

In the nature of large apparatus for the use of pure oil Professor Alwood recommends any of the well made force pumps, but they should be carefully fitted up for high pressure.

The exit orifice in the cap of the nozzle should be small for the use of kerosene, not larger than one twentieth of an inch in diameter, and preferably a still smaller one.

With this small orifice and high pressure an excellent spray mist can be obtained, and by going over the plants lightly a couple of times at each treatment better results are secured with greater safety to the plants.

Choose bright, warm weather for this work and go over the trees rapidly so as to just moisten the branches and twigs.

Mowing the Lawn.

The number of times the lawn should be cut will depend very much upon the character of the season or the amount of irrigation.

Ordinarily, in parks at least, the lawn is mown every week or ten days, although in some sections where the soil is good and there is a continuous growth of grass the lawn mower is kept constantly going.

According to the agronomist of the department of agriculture, the oftenest error is in mowing and in the frequency it is rolled the better and finer the turf.

The grass should not be allowed to attain such a growth that when cut there will be any decided change in color.

The lawn should be kept close cut, and this can only be done by frequent mowings. During the dry summer months it is best not to cut so close as in the spring or fall.

This applies to parks and lawns of large extent. Too close cutting in midsummer is apt to expose the roots to the burning influence of the summer sun.

Mowing should begin as soon as growth starts in the spring and ought to be discontinued in the regions where the winters are severe by the last of September or October.

How to Use Emulsions.

The department of agriculture recommends: For summer applications for most insects, dilute with soft-bodied insects dilute with 15 to 20 parts of water; for the red spider and other plant mites, dilute with 10 to 15 parts of water; for scale insects, dilute with 7 to 8 parts of water.

For subterranean insects, such as root lice, root maggots, "white grubs," etc., use either kerosene emulsion or rosin emulsion, dilute with the depth of two to three inches, and follow with copious watering, unless in rainy season.

A Fine Hardy Herbaceous Plant.

"One of the best hardy herbaceous plants of its class, yet not often seen in our gardens," is what American Gardening says of the chrysanthemum.

Chrysanthemum elegans.

Pyrethrum glaberrimum, in depicting its "wax of the rays are pure white, the disk being yellow."

The flowers are produced late in the summer, when other flowers in the border are becoming scarce. The plant is, as just noted, perfectly hardy, very showy and excellent for cutting. The plant attains a height of two to three feet.

A YOUNG GIRL'S ESCAPE.

Saved from being a Nervous Wreck BY MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

For the benefit of Canadian mothers, who have daughters who are weak, pale, run down or nervous, Mrs. B. B. Milburn, 122, Rideau Street, Ottawa, Ontario, made the following statement, so that no one need suffer through ignorance of the light remedy to use: "My daughter suffered very much from brain troubles at times. Often she was so bad that she could not speak, but had to sit and gasp for breath. I was so extremely nervous that her limbs would fairly shake and tremble. Frequently she would have to leave school, and finally she grew so weak that we were much alarmed about her health. I gave her many remedies, but they did not seem to do her any good."

Then I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and got a box of them. They have indeed worked wonders with her, and she is now very healthy and happy. As the best remedy I ever heard of for complaints similar to those from which my daughter suffered."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills never fail to do good. They cure palpitation, faintness, dizziness, smothering sensation, weakness, nervousness, sleeplessness, anxiety, female troubles and general debility. Sold by all druggists at 50c. a box or three boxes for $1.25. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ontario.

TYENINGA RESERVE.

There is still a great deal of sickness on the reserve. Dr. Newton has good hopes in the majority of cases.
Another powerful memorial has been presented to Hon. Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior, to the reserve statement of Dr. Newton as medical attendant of the Reserve. It is to be hoped that the minister will act discreetly in the matter and thus avoid a severe censure as the matter will be brought before the highest tribunal, if justification is not forthcoming in this place.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Scott, of Colborne, celebrated their golden wedding on Monday, Oct. 10th, and the event was marked by the presence of a very pleasant family gathering at their residence. They received a large number of handsome presents. It may be mentioned that they have had twelve children of whom all but one, the late Mrs. E. H. Lapp, are still living. At this joyous anniversary there were present: Fred Scott, Mrs. W. Scott and Misses Nettie and Ella Scott of Colborne; James Scott of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott, Misses Lou and Ethel Scott, Mrs. N. T. Lowe, and Mr. and Mrs. L. Verden of Deseronto; Lincoln and Blake Scott of Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Flewelling of Rochester, and Wallace Scott at present in Western Ontario were unavoidably prevented from attending. The day was spent in a most enjoyable manner. The following verses were composed for the occasion by Rev. T. Watson, Baptist clergyman at Colborne:

TO MR. AND MRS. R. B. SCOTT ON THE OCCASION OF THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.
On this your Golden Wedding day,
Your kindred and your friends unite
To cheer you on your onward way
To that fair home which knows no night.

Your lives, in useful labor spent,
In fire our hearts with grateful love;
Long may you here have sweet content,
And then enjoy the rest above.

Through fifty years of wedded life,
Each to the other you have been
A husband kind, a faithful wife,
Another change you have seen.
And now, encircled by your friends,
With sons and daughters by your side.

For you the earnest prayer ascends
That God will aid your footsteps guide;
And while your minds this day review
The path you have so bravely trod,
May countless mercies ever send Increase your earnest faith in God.

Submissive to his gracious will,
May he in you his grace display,
May he your hearts with gladness fill,
And bless your Golden Wedding day.

CURED HIS BOY.

G. W. Stevenson, Brombridge, Ont., says: Your Douglas' Egypt Liniment cured my little boy, 5 years old, of a bad fever sore on inside of knee joint. We doctored and did all we could for him for months; he fell away to a mere shadow and was a terrible cripple for months. Mr. J. Shier, lumberman of this town, kindly sent over a bottle of your Egyptian Liniment and he had great faith in the preparation, and we started using it, and to day he is a smart and around. The neighbors were somewhat surprised and especially the doctors, and I am proud of the great success I have had in curing my son.

AN AUTUMN MORNING.
The frost's gleam where the dew was dripping
Just in the space of a day's sun.
The trees drop leaves of the autumn dawn.
Some of either the thrush or the lark
Rings and whistles in a broken flow.
The trees are in a twitter of spirit
Shivers a peevish song.

The frost's gleam on the path I follow
Near the water with the willow's flow.
Adorn the trees with the willow's flow.
Where the water tangles its lustrous threads.
What is there left of the summer's story—
The faded roses, the faded rose—
The faded roses, the faded rose—
Quashed in the film of an autumn frost?

Deep in the fringe of its willow cover,
Where the water's surface is so bright,
The stream that sings in a summer low,
Echoes the song of an ended trust.
Hides Whitney in Woman's House Companion.

Mr. Brown says: "I give your medicine all the credit for my restoration."

WELLS & RICHMOND CO.

Gentlemen—I am truly thankful for the good result that I have obtained from the use of your Paine's Celery Compound.

For a long time I have been a sufferer from general debility and indigestion, and the use of many medicines, but none have given me

the good results as far as improved health is concerned, as has your wonderful Paine's Celery Compound.

I have done wonders for me and in 15 years old, I have been able to do light work for the past few months, and have not lost a day. I give your medicine all the credit for my restoration.

MARY, KNITTING.

When Mary sits knitting
Beside the cozy fire,
Reminding face and shape
With mother's looks and smile,
It makes them seem holy,
With concentrated piety,
With calm smile in the flesh,
That she herself has been
The mother of the needles.
The clicking of the needles,
The sound of the loom,
Makes her a queen and saint,
And she sits there in the earth's waves—in every direction
The little world she governs
Laboriously being fair.
We need not the real thing
But we need the thing that
And in the end, the thing
A little light and love
The world's a little lower Until she sits in the
Before she says it is done.
It is a prayer.

A SOLDIER'S WIFE.

A more desolate site for a fort could not have been selected by the government. However, the United States government was not looking for beautiful scenery when it had the post built, but for a location close to the treacherous Indian and where the soldiers could quickly move to the front.

Around the fort stretched the monotonous plains, rising and falling—the
earth's waves—in every direction
in the distance they seemed to meet the sky. It was a dreary, desolate place, the only sign of vegetation being the sagebrush, the grease weed and bunches of cactus everywhere. There were acres of alkali, all burning beneath the sun
during the day and freezing beneath the moon at night. There was no animal life upon all the expanse of country except the prairie dogs and now
and then a few hungry coyotes.

So desolately calm was the landscape that even the buzzard hesitated in his stately flight, and the little gray hawk sailed on and on, doubtless with his eyes closed to the earth.

As a general thing there was amusement enough at the fort. Men assigned to the post made up their minds that they depended upon each other for amusement, and their wives shared the same belief, very often were they not soldiers, and were not the women soldiers' wives? But of course the little petty jealousies and little petty quarrels crept into that particular post just the same as they had crept into every other post and would continue to creep in as long as the government supported forts and as long as men and women lived and breathed, for that matter. It was very lonely around the post, for the war had been declared. That awful specter, dreaded by every wife of a soldier and longed for by the men, had come. There was considerable speculation as to its probable length and much fear that they would not be out of the war in less than a year. The soldiers were so far removed from the railroad, perhaps the war department would not even remember the fort was in existence.

The women were not anxious for the war. They knew what it meant. Their faces were very pale and they were crying out for the four troops of cavalry that made up the post. There was wild cheering among the enlisted men around the stables and among the youngsters, for each one looked forward to see his own regiment in the field, at least a captain, if not a major, and in fighting fancy even a lieutenant colonel. They did not stop to think that they might be made only first lieutenants.

It was all excitement to the women, too, for a few days, for they were assisting the men that they did not think of the long, weary days. Besides, they really did not believe that their husbands would see any actual warfare. They thought it would all be over within a few weeks and then John nie would come marching home, and they would have something else to talk about beside the commonplace things of life. But one woman thought about
it. She was the wife of the second lieutenant of Troop D. They had married the very next day after his graduation from the Point, and his first station had been at this lonely fort. He told her to be brave.

"You are a soldier's wife," he said to her, as she burst into tears and buried her face on his shoulder.

"Yes, I am a soldier's wife, but that does not prevent me from having a heart," she answered.

"No," he replied, "and, having a brave heart, a true heart and a knowledge that you are a soldier's wife, you must face all sorrows and trials with our fighting."

The words appealed to her. The half dozen other women in the post thought so much of her, a mere girl and pitted her so that her husband should be ordered to the front that they asked the major to assign him as the officer in charge of the fort during the absence of the troops, but he begged so hard to go that he was allowed to do so. The woman spoke to his wife about it; told them
what they would be doing.

"Robert wants to go," she said. "It is the chance of a lifetime with him,
and does not his country call?"

"But you?" answered one of the women.

She looked her questioner straight in the eyes.

"I am a soldier's wife," she replied
proudly.

The rush was soon over, and the men were now mounted and ready to go.
The officers bade their wives goodbye,
and they, too, sprang into the saddle.
The bugle sounded, and the troops took up the march over to the railroad. The women stood and looked across the sun drenched plain until every particle of dust raised by the horses had settled, until all the world seemed to be as before,
and then each went into her own house
and then they gathered at the major's house and sat gazing out over the darkened plain and spoke of the absent ones.
The long weary wait was over.

The loneliness was more like home than any other place.

Five troops and a lieutenant and a lieutenant's wife, and they were the only signs of life down around the quarters and the stables. The lieutenant was morose and gloomy that he should have been selected as the one to remain behind and was not accounted much company to the women the first few days, but gradually he became recuperated to his fate and sat with them every evening and talked of the probable length of his stay at the fort and discussed the improbability of action.

They sent once a week for the mail.
The first letters and papers brought word that the four troops had joined their regiment, and the letters were filled with gossip about the officers and their families, for a regiment is naught
but one large family. Then came days of watching and waiting, and the next was the movement of troops to Santiago.

Then the women knew that the war had begun in earnest. The full realization of it came home to them. The older women remembered when it was nothing but their husbands to be ordered out to suppress the Indians, while one or two remembered the civil war, but there was nothing of that kind for the wife of the second lieutenant to remember. She carried herself bravely, however, and proudly said that she was the wife of a soldier and all soldiers' wives should be brave, a remark that greatly pleased the others.

The women learned more about her
now that her husband was not present to monopolize all her time. They learned that she was quite alone in the world, that she was an orphan, that she was
and that the aunt who had reared her had died. This increased their sympathy for her, if that were possible, for she had their sympathy already. They could see that her thoughts were all of her husband, but if they thought of her, they would comfort her and she replied, "I am a soldier's wife."

The news traveled slowly to them.
That perhaps was the hardest. Their husbands might have been in battle and have been wounded or killed; the four troops might be wiped out and it would be fully a week before they would know
it. When the papers did arrive, there was a hurried glance at the headlines
and then for the regimental head.

The battle of Santiago had been fought and won. The news had been telegraphed undersea and overland and the papers had come out with the particulars under display headlines. It was just a week after that the papers reached the fort. The troops brought them in the evening and delivered them to the women, sitting under the cottonwood trees that skirted the parade ground. The wife of the second lieutenant had gone for a walk and was not with them. A cry burst from the white lips of the women. The headlines told them that their men had been in the thick of the fight. They glanced down the columns, read the account and of the deeds of bravery of their men. They read the list of the dead and wounded.
The wife of the second lieutenant came up to them. She saw the papers lying in the laps of the women; she glanced at their faces. She read the news.

"There has been a battle!" she said
interrogatively.

"Yes," said one of the women.

"And Robert?" she asked.

"He was in the thick of the fight,
leading his men on and cheering them."

Indian Falls, on Shantel ter.
A Navajo Indian, can live more within the folds of his blanket than a successful hide many stolen articles before our eyes. The settlers along the San Juan and Animas rivers, during the early days, had to put all their stealable possessions in one corner of their place of abode and stand guard when the Navagos were visiting, which was a so-frequent occurrence. "Chinny ab-go" (meaning something to eat) was the first intimation generally that an Indian was near (perhaps a half dozen). They rarely exceeded half a dozen in number,
as they, like the American boys, had learned that smaller numbers stood a better show to get something to eat.

One day in A. R. Lincoln's cabin, on the month bank of the San Juan river, three Navagos were talking of their evening meal when a Navajo with a glass eye walked in. All tried to watch the Indian's movements, but he had managed to get several articles under his blanket and would not have been detected had not an accident befallen him. A hatchet which slipped from one of the folds in his blanket fell, and the sharp blade cut a long gash in the calf of his leg. The Indian looked to the root of the cabin as if wondering where the hatchet had fallen from, but the blood spurting from the open gash betrayed him. His blanket was shaken, and a butcher knife, miner's candlestick, several candles and a package of tobacco, all belonging to the Indian, fell on the earthy floor—Durango (Col.)

The Causes of Cancer.
There are few diseases that afflict the human family that are more to be dreaded than those of a cancerous nature. The cancer proper is a most appalling thing to life. Whether it can be cured is and always has been a debatable question. Cases are cited where alleged marvelous cures have been effected, but this does not to any appreciable extent alter the facts in the case that the cancer is practically incurable once it gets any sort of headway in the system. The causes of this disease have been so imperfectly understood that any effort at prevention was worse than useless. A French scientist claims to have discovered cancer germs in wood, and that artisans who work in wood are much more subject to this disease, all things considered, than those who handle most other materials. Having once started on this line of research, he found cancer germs in wood and vegetation of various kinds.
Elm and willow trees showed a greater proportion of these germs than other woods. In high altitudes or where trees are not common very few cancer germs were found. From all of which it appears that we may be as safe on the highroad to some reliable and conclusive knowledge upon a subject which has baffled the skill of medical scientists for many years.—

Deseronto, Ont., August 9th, 1898

Owing to the Rathbun Company having decided to wind up their Big Store business, I beg to advise you that I intend carrying on the ordered clothing trade, on my own account, at the old quarters, in the Oliver block, Main Street, where I hope to meet all my old customers and all others who can appreciate up-to-date methods and a business like desire to give them value for their money.

The stock will be new and fresh, comprising all the latest novelties in English, French and Canadian Tweeds and cloths. We feel assured, that in design, quality and variety, it will appeal to the taste and intelligence of the most exacting.

Our facilities for manufacturing will be such that every customer may rely on prompt and satisfactory treatment.

Reflecting on past experience, we have decided to adopt a "strictly cash system," trusting that all may realize that this course will prove to the advantage of all concerned.

Respectfully Yours,

WM. STODDART.

NORTHERN ONTARIO.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—The official report of Mayor Sturges' party of exploration during the past summer, visiting the far north with a view to discovering its possibilities, was completed yesterday and forwarded to W. OCTOBER.

The frost has opened the chest-nut buds, and the nut fall fairly, two and three; The squirrel chatters, the partridge whistles, and the red-capped woodpecker bores his tree.

Oh, lightly and lightly the birch leaves fall.

Like golden butterflies loosed in Spring: And bright as the sails of a fairy boat The Walnut leaves take wing.

Now come, now come, far down the lane The autumn leekon, the robin call! The shrunken brook grows broad again, And leaps in a laughing waterfall. Over the style and over the bridge, Adorn the path where the meek cows stray.

By glen and hollow and windy ridge Let us follow the wood and the way. See! how the marvellous cloth of gold A Trianan apron woven fine Wide as we wander is still unrolled, And the tall trees stand as if in prayer The breath of the woodland is joy to breathe—

The mingled odors of leaf and flower, The clustering fruit where the wild vines wreath.

The oak-tree's mossy tower, Softly into the violet wood Through painted windows the sunbeams amuse.

The bushy winds walk in pensive mood I own many a solemn Gothic ruin, The golden clouds laugh now in air, Wrapped in their folds to the late autumn rears; And the tall trees stand as if in prayer With their heads upon their breasts

THEY ALL PERISHED.

Quebec, Oct. 18.—The steamship Krim, arriving in port from Sydney yesterday, and reports seeing a schooner capsized in the storm at Matane, in the course of the afternoon Saturday. Three hundred and thirty were made and two boats swamped in trying to rescue the crew, but they all perished. Three of the men, clung to the upturned stern of the ship, but were finally swept away, one by one. The captain could not ascertain the name of the schooner.

PATTERING THE TURKEYS.

Farm and Fireside.—Get ready for Thanksgiving, at once, by getting off, by having large and fat turkeys to sell. Make them now by allowing them meat and cut bone once a day, with a good feed of grain at night. About two weeks before selling them, put them in a large yard and feed bread made of two parts bran and two parts corn, and a small quantity of oats and one part linseed meal. Give this as a morning meal. At noon give chopped clover, sprinkled with corn meal. At night give corn and wheat. A pound of crude lard to every four pounds of bread will be an advantage. Fed in this manner, the turkeys should be very fat in two weeks.

MAKES MUCH MONEY.

The Glasgow corporation, now owns property of the value of $10,000,000, administers a revenue of $2,000,000 per annum, and employs 12,000 workmen. Before any socialist were elected to the Glasgow corporation it was the custom to give the highly paid officials a retiring allowance of two-thirds of their salary, but the workers who had to retire at an old age were paid off with from $8.6d. to 5s. per week, and it is expected that the allowance of all will be greatly increased.

A skater from John McNaughton's song is very true: "The Gleses folk pe unco folk." The next move talked about is the establishment of municipal bakeries.

WEDDED AT WARKWORTH.

The Belleville Ontario says: "The residence of Wm. Bensley, George street, Warkworth, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, Oct. 12th, when his sister-in-law, Miss Florence, third daughter of the late Alfred Mayhew, of Warkworth, and formerly of Belleville, was married to W. J. Reid, of Boboyaggon.

The bride was attended by Miss Emma Reid, sister of the groom, and Miss Kate Snodgrass. E. E. Johnson, of Montreal, and Rev. W. J. Creighton, of Boboyaggon, supported the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Totten, assisted by Rev. Geo. Scott. The room was artistically decorated with pink, saffron and flowers. The bride was gowned in white silk and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaids wore green and pink respectively and carried pink noes. After the ceremony and congratulations a dainty dejeuner was served, followed by the usual toasts, after which, amid showers of rice and old shoes, the happy couple left to catch the train for the east.

The guests gathered from far and near and their good wishes for Mrs. Reid were expressed by the many beautiful and pure presents which she received." The bride was at one time teacher in the Deseronto Public school.

OTTAWA CHEESE BOARD.

OTTAWA CITIZEN.

That portion of the central and northern counties that formerly did business with Belleville, Port Hope and other cities on the lake front, now make Ottawa their business centre; and the construction of the Barry Sound Railway and Ottawa short line have drawn much trade in this direction. In no instance has this centralizing influence been more clearly shown than in the success of the cheese board established last spring in connection with the Ottawa Board of Trade by J. Savanagh and others. The trade was phenomenally large, 20,000 boxes being sold here, the approximate value to date being $108,821.65. Over 1,200 people came to Ottawa to do business with the board, and it is estimated that the direct benefit to the city from marketing the cheese amounted to at least $5,000. This is a splendid record for the first season.

DEATH OF CHARLES HUDSON.

Charles Hudson died Friday evening at his residence on William street, Belleville, after an illness extending over many months, caused by dropsy and heart trouble from which he suffered very greatly.

For seven years Mr. Hudson had been a resident in this city and no citizen was more greatly esteemed than he. He was a thoroughly honest and sincere in all his business and social relations with the people of the city and he was consequently with deep regret that his numerous friends and acquaintances say him forced to sever his connection with the commercial community to preserve his declining health. This regret has been increased to sorrow and grief now that he has passed from earth.

Charles Hudson was the fourth son of the late Charles Hudson, of Roslin, where he was born nearly fifty-two years ago. For many years he carried on a large retail store in Roslin, which he disposed of to the late John McNaughton seven years ago, going into partnership with Adam Henry. He afterwards took over the management of the Roslin Hardware and branch office here which he held until his failing health compelled him to resign. He was married to Miss Susan, of Roslin, by Rev. Mr. Totten, of Roslin, and they had two sons, namely, W. P. Hudson, and one sister, namely, W. P. Hudson, ex-M. P. P. of this city. Dr. Hudson, Roslin, Henry in Pontiac, Mich., and Mrs. E. Ketchum, Sidney Town Hall.

For many years the deceased was treasurer of East Hastings Agricultural Society. He was a member of the Roslin and Belleville lodges of the Order of the Masons, under whose auspices the funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon.

He was a Conservative in politics and a member of St. Thomas's Church—Belleville Ontario.

COMING DOUKHOBORS.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Mr. Alynor Maude of England is in a contest for the post of Mayor of the Toronto Municipality. Mr. Maude is interested in the scheme for the settlement in Canada of the Russian sect known as the Doukhobors. These people have practically the same religious views as the English Quakers. They have conscientious scruples against engaging in war, and it is for this reason that they have been persecuted by the Russian authorities. There are about 7,500 of them in Russia, and it has been practically decided that they will emigrate as a body to the country. It is expected that 2,500 people will sail from Batsum in a few days, directly for Quebec, and from thence will journey to the Volost, Prince Rupert. A nephew of the Russian Minister of Railways, will settle in Canada, alongside the colony, in the development of the colony, in an expected interest.

FARM AND GARDEN
THE SOY BEAN.
One of the Most Promising of Annual Leguminous Crops in Canada.

BOY BEANS.

peanut alone exceeds it in the amount and digestibility of its food constituents. The soy bean requires about the same class of soils as Indian corn and will grow about as far north as that crop can be grown. The best results with it have been obtained in the region between the thirty-seventh and forty-fourth parallel east of the Rocky mountains. The region best adapted to it, then, is the "corn belt," a circumstance which argues well for its future use and value in conjunction with corn for fattening animals.

The soy bean should be planted in late spring or early summer after the ground has become warm. In general the early varieties should be used if a seed crop is desired and the medium or late varieties if it is to be used as forage. It having been found that the latter much exceed the former in value for that purpose. In some parts of Virginia the soy bean is planted in the corn rows in alternate hills or between the rows at the time of the final cultivation. Usually, however, it is grown as a main crop, either broadcast for forage or in drills when cultivated for seed. The amount of seed required when it is sown in drills is less than when planted broadcast, varying from two to three pecks per acre and in the latter case three to four pecks. The rate of growth is quite rapid, and unless the field is very weedy the crop does not require much cultivation.

The crop should be cut for hay from the time of flowering and the pods are half formed. Later than that the stems are coarse and woody and the feeding value rapidly declines.

The crop may be converted into good silage and for this purpose should not be cut until the seed is nearly ripe. The chief value of silage is that it provides a succulent food during the winter time when green forage is not available, but as certain changes take place in the silo, which render a large part of the protein indigestible, it is better to depend upon corn than to use any leguminous crop for this purpose.

The ripe soy beans are among the richest of concentrated foods. The yield varies, according to soil and season, from 5 to 15 tons of green forage. The yield of seed varies as low as 15 to as high as 100 bushels per acre, the average being about that of corn, from 25 to 40 bushels.

This crop is a heavy potash feeder and requires fertilization with lime and with potash and phosphoric acid when grown on such lighter soils as are deficient in these elements.

According to the year book of the department of agriculture, the above statements and illustrations, the soy bean is one of the most promising of the annual leguminous forage crops, and, as before indicated, may prove of special value in connection with Indian corn, the latter supplying the "roughness," the soy bean producing the digestible crude protein necessary to make a complete and well balanced ration.

The Radish Season.
With most farmers the radish season is much shorter than it used to be. It is a root that needs to be grown quickly, else it will be hard and tough, and the weather must not be too warm, else the radishes will either grow pithy or be filled with worms. These last bred fast in soil made rich by fermented stable manure. Yet, as The American Cultivator tells, the market gardeners have radishes all through the year, and have little trouble in keeping them from being pithy or wormy. They spray the leaves freely, and thus check the evaporation which makes the root pithy. To make the radish grow fast and free from worms they manure with nitrate of soda. A plant in rather sandy soil on such land the radish is clear and crisp and will be generally free from worms. Some of the Chinese varieties of radish are particularly adapted to growing in late autumn. There are others that can be kept in good condition until winter by cutting off all the top and keeping them in a cold place covered with enough sand to exclude the air.

Her First Order.
She was newly married and did not know a little bit about either house-keeping or shopping, and she was giving her very first order. It was a crusher, but the grocer was a clever man and was used to all kinds of orders and could interpret them freely.

"I want ten pounds of paralyzed angus," she began, with a businesslike air. "Yes'm. Anything else?"

"Two cans of condensed milk."

"Yes'm."

He set down "pulverized sugar" and "condensed milk."

"Anything more, ma'am?"

"A bag of fresh salt. Be sure it's fresh."

"Yes'm. What next?"

"A pound of desiccated codfish."

He wrote glibly "desiccated cod."

"Nothing more, ma'am? We have some nice horse radish just in."

"No," she said. "I would be of no use to us. We don't keep a horse."

Then the grocer sat down and fanned himself with a patent washboard, although the temperature was nearly zero.—New York World.

Kirmess.
In some portions of Germany the kirmess, or church mass, formerly danced in honor of the dedication of a church, now observed with the special character of a harvest home. It marks the close of the year's labor and is celebrated by three days of music, feasting and dancing with partners chosen or allotted, according to degrees of comeliness, at the preceding May festival.

In southern Germany the end of the harvest is marked by the sickle feast. The last sheaf is carried in triumph to the barn and placed on the floor, while the younger couples dance around it. One half of it is then decked with ribbons and hung aloft, while the other half is burned. Its ashes are treasured as a remedy for rheumatism and are sometimes used in making amulets or charms. The peasants leave for Wodan, or "the old one," a few ears of corn and a small quantity of apples, if being considered unlucky to strip either field or tree entirely bare.—Lippincott's.

Letters and Trade.
The London Daily News notes the affinity between letters and trade. Charles Lamb and Mill used to adorn the old India House. Austin Dobson, Gosse and Cosmo Monkhouse are in the board of trade. Benjamin Kidd and W. M. Rossetti used to be at Somerset House. Dante Gabriel Rossetti narrowly escaped at one crisis in his career being a telegraph clerk instead of an artist. The postoffice absorbed for many years the superfluous energies of Anthony Trollope.

His Last Chance.
"Did you ever notice," said Mrs. N. Peck, "that about half of the pictures in the photographers' windows are of bridal couples? I wonder why they always rush off to a photographer as soon as the knot is tied?"

"I fancy the husband is responsible for it," said Mr. Peck. "He realizes that it is about his last chance to ever look pleasant."—Pearson's Weekly.

HUMAN SACRIFICES

On the Altar of Diabetes, Saved by Dodd's Kidney Pills, Only.

Hardly a family in the country is free from Diabetes. Great thirst, fainting sight, numbness in the thighs, bleeding gums, swollen ankles, emaciation, nervousness, pale or turbid urine, loss of sexual power, decaying teeth, pains in the loins or small of the back, are all positive signs that Diabetes is in the system.

Do you know how it ends? In Death. A protracted, horrible, agonizing, painful death. The victim has no peace, no ease in life. His days are filled with tortures. His nights are waking dreams of agony. He longs to die, yet fears the terrors of his end. He dies, a bloated, filthy, repulsive mass of corruption. That is the end of unchecked Diabetes. Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it. They drive it out of the system thoroughly, create new, clean blood, rebuild the diseased kidneys, and restore robust health.

How Great Ran.
In September, 1875, there was a rebellion of the Army of the Cumberland at Ulster, N. Y., at which President Grant, General Sherman, General Hooker, General Sherman and Governor Seymour were present.

Long and loud cries arose for "Grant! Grant!" who, slowly rising from his chair, expressed his pleasure at being with his friends, but his dislike as to being asked to speak and his diffidence in doing so.

"But there are those," he added dryly, pointing to Sherman and Hooker, "who are not troubled with any sort of diffidence."

The three generals present made witty remarks, and then arose cries for "Seymour! Seymour!"

The governor, who had been the defeated Democratic candidate against Grant for the presidency in 1868, came forward and said:

"I think I have some soldierly traits myself. At all events, General Grant, you must acknowledge that in a little corner of me I had a few years ago you ran a great deal better and farther than I did."

This telling allusion to the presidential contest brought down the house. General Grant, convulsed with laughter, rose and bowed his acknowledgments.—Youth's Companion.

At What Age is Man Strongest?
The muscles, in connection with all the organs of the body, have their stages of development and decline. Our physical strength increases up to a certain age and then declines. Tests of the strength of several classes of people have been made by means of a dynamometer (strength measurer), and the following are given as the average figures for the white race:

The "lifting power" of a youth of 17 years is 280 pounds. In his twentieth year this increases to 320 pounds, and in the thirtieth and thirty-first years it reaches its height, 356 pounds. At the end of the thirty-first year the strength begins to decline.

By the fortieth year it has decreased eight pounds, and this diminution continues at a slightly increasing rate until the fiftieth year is reached, when the figure is 330 pounds.

After this period the strength falls more and more rapidly until the weakness of old age is reached. It is not possible to give statistics of the decline of strength after the fiftieth year, as it varies to a large extent in different individuals.—Strand Magazine.

Confusion at These Dinners.
In his dining room Sir Joshua Reynolds constantly entertained all the best known men of his time, including Dr. Johnson, Goldsmith, Garrick, Burke, Sterne, Hogarth, Wilkes, Allan Ramsay and a score of others, who formed the brilliant literary club of which the great painter was the founder. There doubtless in the familiar lines of the author of "Retaliation,"

When they talked of their Raphaels, Correggios and stuff,
He shifted his trumpet and only took snuff.

At these dinner parties, according to Malone, though the wine and the dishes were of the best, there seemed to be a tacit agreement that mind should predominate over body. The table, we are told, though set only for seven or eight, often had to accommodate double that number. There was usually a deficiency of knives, forks and glasses, and the guests had to bawl for more supplies, while the host calmly left every one to shift for himself, though he lost not a word, if he could help it, of the conversation.—London Telegraph.

The Path of the Earth.
The common idea as to the path of the earth being "fixed in space" is taken exception to by astronomers, on the ground that there are few, if any, things in the domain of astronomy that can really be called fixed in space—the fact being that unceasing changes are going on, though these changes are generally so slow as to escape the notice of a superficial observer, but are fortunately periodic, so that they fall within the possibility of computation.

Thus, the earth's path is not fixed, since the elliptic changes its position among the stars, in consequence of which the obliquity of the ecliptic undergoes a very slow change, so that while at present it is a few seconds more than 23 degrees 27 minutes, in about 10,000 years, astronomers calculate it will be reduced to 22 degrees 15 minutes, after which it will begin to increase again, a change so slow and within such narrow limits that it can produce no sensible alterations in the seasons.

The fact remains a positive one, that, even if the earth in its orbital course, and consequently the sun in its apparent motion in the ecliptic were circular, neither the motion in declination nor in right ascension could be uniform.

The Streets of Seoul.
Streets, with a minimum width of 85 feet, with deep, stone-lined channels on both sides, bridged by stone slabs, have replaced the foul alleys, which were breeding grounds of cholera. Narrow lanes have been widened, many runways have been paved, and new long "free corners" for refuse, bicyclists' scorch along broad, level streets, express wagons are looming in the near future, preparations are being made for the building of a "feeling hotel" in a fine situation, shops with glass fronts have been erected in numbers, an order forbidding the throwing of refuse into the streets is enforcing itself, and no more moved from the city by official scavengers—and Seoul, from having been the foulest, is now on its way to being the cleanest city of the far east.—Korea and Her Neighbors, by Mrs. Bishop.

A little child in the east end had a narrow escape from death while playing on the railway track on Monday morning. Had it not been for the presence of mind of Engineer Walker and Conductor Whiting the little one would have perished. Parents should be careful not to allow their children to run at large near the railway tracks.

The many friends of G. A. Cole, of Deseronto Public School, will regret to learn of two serious misfortunes which have befallen the young man. About four weeks ago his home was visited by fire and he and his family narrowly escaped with their lives. Shortly after this, his son Fred, who was only eight years old, met with an accident whereby his arm was broken and the ray of the child was broken. He has still to be kept under the influence of chloroform.

One of A. Q. Scammon's excellent companies will be the attraction at Naylors Opera House on Wednesday evening Oct. 20th presenting their cyclone of fun "Side Tracked." There were more real laughs in this play of "Side Tracked" than in any other show of its class on the road, and yet they are no ludicrous that one can fail to be amused by it. The play is presented by the play company of the "Side Tracked" and is a very successful one.

HE DID NOT DIE.

Nearly two years ago George Chrysler stole a small sum of money from George Pringle and was sent to Kingston Penitentiary for a two year term. About a year ago it was reported here that he had died and a subscription was taken up for the purpose of burying him. His sentence was reduced several months by good conduct and now some of the kind people who subscribed for his funeral have a large sized suspicion that they would be easy money for "greasy" men and a "goldbrick agent."—Belleville Sun.

HOW WHEAT SHOULD GO INTO THE WINTER.

Winter should find the wheat plant strong, well and deeply rooted and with sufficient leaves to fill the drill furrows full. When it goes into the winter in this condition, the chances are good that harvest time will find a full crop of well filled heads of plump grain. For fitting land for sowing I know of no better plan than to plow and harrow. After the land is plowed—which must be done early to be done well—repeated disk and harrowing will reduce the surface to the proper degree of fineness and at the same time pack the soil just right to insure quick germination and a strong growth. Most farmers stop working the soil just as soon as they get it fairly level—just when it is in the best condition for sowing. It should be harrowed and disked and packed (not rolled) and it is as fine as a garden.—E. Grindy in Farm and Fireside.

The exports during the month were $11,610, 112, of which $11,001,126, was produced in Canada, and $2,708,986, produced in the United States. The total value of the 142,294 pounds of cotton, and 2,417, 794 pounds of other countries, during same month last year. This makes the total value of the cotton exports $1,845, 465.08, making a total of $21,655,252, which is an increase of $1,100,000 in imports, and a decrease of $1,441,339 exports over the same month last year. Thin Blood

Where the blood loses its intense red—grows thin and watery, as in anemia, there is a constant feeling of exhaustion, a lack of energy—vitality and the spirits depressed.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is especially adapted to correct the condition of thin blood. The cod-liver oil, emulsified in the most exquisite fineness, enters the blood directly and feeds its every corpuscle, restoring the natural color and giving vitality to the whole system. The hypophosphites reach the brain and nerve centres and add their strength to the cod-liver oil. If the blood is thin and watery, if you are growing thin and exhausted from overwork, or if age is beginning to tell, use SCOTT'S Emulsion. See you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. All druggists, grocers and chemists sell it. SCOTT'S BOWNE, Chemists, Montreal.

A GENTLEMAN DEFINED.

A new definition of a gentleman was given recently in a county court. The defendant was described in the different sets of papers as a butcher, a builder and a tailor. The judge finally appealed to the plaintiff, who replied, "Well he is more like a gentleman than anything else. He walks about all day doing nothing, going from public house to public house."

IS SUTHERLAND DEAD?

The beneficiaries of Alexander J. Sutherland, Kingston, have issued a writ against the Independent Order of Foresters to cover a policy of $3,000. Sutherland took out the policy at Kingston in 1883. Court Foreman. Subsequently he went to sea, and has never been heard of since. The usual procedure in such cases is to go to the courts and have an order declaring the death of the insured. The plaintiff, however, is using under an old English law, which says that if a man is not heard of in seven years he must be considered legally dead.

AN EASY ONE.

Another problem has been handed in for mathematicians to struggle with. We have problems of our own. Tell the answer to the policeman. "A man owed $1 and had 75 cents. He went to the pawnshop and pawned 75 cents for 50 cents. He had 4 friends and sold him the pawn ticket calling for 75 cents for 50 cents. He thus had two fifty-cent pieces in his pocket—what he paid his debt. Was anybody out and how much?"

POPULAR READING.

We have received from The Poole Printing Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont., a copy of this Boston Record by Charles M. Sheldon, the well known author of "In His Steps." This is not only a delightful story, told in an interesting manner, but is full of helpfulness. One of the greatest problems of the day is ably dealt with. The scenes in the winning region are based upon events which occurred during the great strike among the iron miners in summer of 1885, and which were witnessed by Dr. Acland Ormohyatekha.

DR. ACLAND ORMOHYATEKHA COMPLIMENTED.

At the High Court, meeting of California held at Santa Barbara, the Hon. S. J. Davis in his speech nominating Dr. Acland Ormohyatekha for High Physician, paid a high tribute to the Supreme Chief, in the stand taken during the time of friction between the Supreme Chief and the High Court of California. He asked that his nominee be unanimously elected as an honor to the government of the Supreme Chief and the High Court of California. He asked for the ability shown by Dr. Acland Ormohyatekha. Dr. Acland Ormohyatekha in declining the nomination said in part "I am held up to you as an alien, as one without voice in the west. A year ago I came to the Golden West; my highway is presently fixed on the shores of the Pacific. I therefore beg to disclaim any more consideration than any other member of this High Court. My nomination is asked for my election as an expression of good will to the Supreme Chief Ranger! That, my brethren, is totally unnecessary. The expression of such hearty applause which has marked every mention of his name is a sufficient guarantee of the sincere and deep respect you all have for our beloved Supreme Chief Ranger." Besides being honored by nomination for High Physician, Dr. Acland Ormohyatekha was called on by Hon. Geo. A. McElresh to fill the chair of the High Vice, pro tem; and was also elected secretary of the finance committee.

A CURE FOR PILES!

Michael Fitzgerald, Marlbank, Ont., says: "Douglas' Egyptian Liniment cured me of Piles after years of suffering, and doctor's bills. I doctored in United States for five years without being cured, and having read Mr. Douglas's statement of his cure and knowing him personally, I said it must be a fact or he never would have testified to such. However, I bought a bottle of Egyptian Liniment, and must confess that it cured me entirely and I have been cured for four years and over; after all my expense, 25 cents made the cure."

THE HORSE IN BATTLE.

A veteran cavalry horse partakes of the hopes and fears of battle just the same as his rider. As the column swings into line and waits, the horse grows nervous over the waiting. If the wait is span out he will tremble and sweat and grow apprehensive. If he has been six months in service he knows every bugle call. As the call comes to advance the rider can feel him working at the bit with his tongue to get it between his teeth. As he moves out he will either seek to get on faster than he should or halt. He cannot bolt, however. The lines will be cast him forward and after a minute he will grip, lay back his ears, and one can feel his sudden resolve to brave the worst and have done with it as soon as possible.

A man seldom cries out when hit in the turmoil of battle. It is the same with a horse. Five troopers are out of six when struck with a bullet. Are out of their saddles within a minute. If hit in the breast the horse will go on his hands and they get a heavy fall; if in the leg, or foot, or arm, they fall forward and roll off. Even with a foot cut off by a javelin, a piece of shell, a horse will not drop. It is only when shot through the head or heart that he comes down. He may be hit in the side, wounded, but hobbles out of the fight to right or left and stands with drooping head until loss of blood brings him down. The horse then lies still. If he is killed and unattended himself will continue to run with his set of fours until some movement throws him out.

A GRAND JUROR.

The day Mary Hammond accepted Joyce her mother handed her a $1,000 bond, her share of her father's life insurance. She thought of pretty gowns to be worn as a bride. Then she sobered up. David would think her silly; she was so practical. She was sorry for David.

About a month after the engagement John Alroy was made postmaster of Garret. He was young, quick, clever and handsome. Joyce was busy at the store, so Mary often called on him. He called on her, he calling for her later on in the evening. He did not dance; Alroy did. It gradually dawned upon him that Mary danced a good deal with the postmaster.

In April he made his usual spring trip to buy goods. He had been away a week, when he received a letter from Mary. She asked to be absolved from her marriage to him. He was stunned and stunned home. The calmness with which Mary met him told him his doom.

"It is Alroy, of course," he said. "I am sure you told me that you were a widow," she returned, "but I never knew what love was until I met him, and Joyce went away."

Throughout the summer he saw little of the happy pair. Joyce's business excursions taking him often away from home. Winter came, and the store closed him. April loomed up—the anniversary of his shattered hopes—and he heard that Mary would be married in June. In June the marriage was put off until autumn.

This was the reason: The postoffice at Garret was third class. Out of his salary the postmaster was expected to pay all office expenses. In class offices clerk hire and other liabilities were met by the government, while the salary of the master was considerably increased. Alroy proposed to raise his office to the second class, so as to be able to marry. To do this he must prove that the business of his office had increased for a year to such an extent that it equalled existing second class offices. Late in the summer he said that this was so, and he was named as grand juror on the 20th of February in the city more than 100 miles away.

The afternoon of the 18th brought a blinding snowstorm. The streets were deserted. Alroy stood at a standstill. About 4 o'clock and nearly dark a lady entered Joyce's private room at the store. It was Mary Hammond. "I have heard," she said at once, "that you are a grand juror in the February term. The postmaster's case comes up before you."

Joyce's heart gave a bound. He had not thought of that. "The grand jury, I am informed," she went on, "is an efficient ground to make out a case to go before the court. You will have a voice in deciding whether or not there is a case against the postmaster."

Joyce's eyes were like coals of fire. "If it were in your power, you would convict the postmaster," she said. "Joyce found his voice. 'If I knew him to be guilty, yes,' he said."

"He is guilty," she went on. "The stamps were bought by me with the $1,000 of my father's insurance. I proposed the fraud. Love for him made me do as I have done. Love for me made him do the rest."

Without another word she went from the room out into the snowstorm. Joyce trembled in every limb. The insult drove him wild. She knew that he still loved her, and she called upon that love to save Alroy even at the expense of honor. The outrage of it! Alroy was guilty, and there was but one thing to do. Love and honor contended—hopeless love, indelible honor. There could be no question as to which would win.

The following day, the outrage—the insult—gnawed at him, he went on the 100 mile journey. On the morning of the 20th he took out that he would do his duty as a good and loyal man in the matters to be placed before the grand jury. In a few minutes more he was sitting, with 23 other men, around a long table, listening to detectives and others testifying against named people. How many cases were disposed of he hardly knew, when he heard the name he had waited for. Joyce raised his head. Now would come his suffering, and all the pain he had silently suffered, and yet his revenge would be only his honest duty. His face grew hard and dim.

A postoffice expert testified among other things that Alroy had openly boasted that he would raise his office to second grade so that the increase of salary would warrant his marriage. Two other witnesses testified as to the facts already known.

"Well, gentlemen," said the foreman of the jury. "I move that a true bill be found," cried a juror. "I second the motion," said another. "All in favor of a true bill signify their assent by saying 'aye,'"

Several "ayes," "Contrary, no," "Several "noes." The foreman and an officer of the court looked around the table. "He may or may not have thought the sales legitimate," said one. "Oughtn't he to have the benefit of the doubt?" asked another. "It is getting very easy to accuse men of dishonesty." "An official like a postmaster," said a juror, "should be above suspicion." "Rather unfair to make his wish to be married the cause for his rascality," said the youngest juror.

"And to blame him for his ambition in trying to raise his office," said a kind voice. "Gentlemen," said the court officer, "a majority of six is sufficient to make out a true bill, and a like majority of one may ignore a bill. These in favor of a true bill will please rise."

The man next to Joyce sprang up to his feet. The motion got up. Joyce counted three, four, five.

"If he knew that the bare sale of the stamps did not substantiate his claim, he would not have brought a bill against him," said a juror. Another man stood up, still another.

"Only seven. Ah, eight, nine, ten, eleven."

"Twelve," said the juror on the other side of Joyce.

Joyce, with a feeling of exaltation that his revenge was to be even greater than he had hoped—when he could give the casting vote which would decide the case against Alroy—straightened out his knees to rise and form the majority of one. At that moment he heard a low, tremulous voice. "I proposed the fraud. Love for him made me do as I have done; love for me made me do the rest."

He glanced furtively around, almost expecting to see the owner of the voice—the woman he loved, the woman who had treated him so badly—the woman who had gauged his honor and love.

"Your duty as a good and loyal man—"

"No majority," sang out the court officer. "A tie. Let me try again another way. These in favor of ignoring the bill please to rise."

"Your duty as a good and loyal man—"

Twelve men were standing up. "How is this, gentlemen?" said the court officer. "Still a tie."

"I proposed the fraud," came that low, tremulous voice. "Love for him made me do as I have done; love for me made me do the rest." Love! Did Joyce know what love was? Did he know the power Mary's love must have exercised over the man she loved—the man she had ruined? Did he know the woman he loved? Did he realize what she had done? And did he know of Alroy's love for her, of his striving after happiness with her even at the price of that which men hold to be the first principle of manhood—honor? Was there a chance for retrieving a chance for their peace, made purer by their mistake and suffering? Was there nothing higher than mere duty? Was it duty to irrevocably ruin two lives which might yet be made better? My word would be sure of the part her discarded lover played in this case, despite her guessing, and—oh, his honor, his honor, and, oh, his pain, his hopeless love!

"Still a tie," impatiently said the court officer.

Oh, his honor, and, oh, his pain, his hopeless love! But, oh, Mary's happiness!

Joyce, the thirteenth juror, suddenly slipped on his feet, making the majority of one.

"Majority!" proclaimed the court officer. "The bill is ignored."

The thirteenth juror fell into heap on the floor.—Robert C. V. Myers in Buffalo Times.

Ancient Varieties of Dogs.
The first domesticated mammal seems to have been the dog. In the Swiss Soles of 1897, the first year of the Professor Studer read a paper on ancient European dogs. The oldest variety was the so-called peat dog. It belongs to the neolithic period. There were four other varieties known in the bronze period and in that of the dark dwellings. Direct descendants of these are the German hunting hounds, the shepherd dog and the poodle.

In America there is little evidence that any dog was trained for hunting. In the far north the Eskimo dog was a beast of draft, the only one known to the red race. The dogs of Mexico and Central America seem to have been principally raised for food or ceremonial sacrifices. In Peru there were several varieties under domestication, two of which have been clearly distinguished. It is noteworthy that although in many American tribes the dog was a sacred or mythical animal in the legends he was not regarded with affection, but with dislike and aversion, a fact strongly brought out by Von Tschudi.—D. G. Britton in Science.

M. de Mirabelle Would Not Tell.
"A venerable and worthy nobleman, M. Pompidou de Mirabelle, was imprudent enough to repeat at a supper party some unflattering remarks he had heard touching M. de Pompidou and M. de Sartines, the chief of police. Warned that de Sartines had filled in his name on a lettre de cachet, M. de Mirabelle called at the police office and asked what prison he should betake himself. 'To Vincennes,' said de Sartines."

"No Vincennes," repeated M. de Mirabelle to his coachman, and he arrived at the dungeon before the order for his detention.

"Once a year de Sartines made a formal visit to Vincennes, and once a year pronounced of M. de Mirabelle the name of the author of the verses. 'If I knew, I should not tell you,' was the invariable reply, 'but as a matter of fact I never heard it in my life.' M. de Mirabelle died in Vincennes a very old man."—D'Arnaud of Paris.

PUT YOUR FINGER ON YOUR PULSE.

If it is Weak or Irregular don't Hesitate to Start the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills at once.

"I am glad to say that from Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I derived the first relief benefit that I ever got from any medicine. My appetite is improved, my entire system toned up, and I can do no less than cheerfully recommend these pills to every suffering from heart and nerve tonic."

Mrs. Mary E. Hicks, South Bay, says: "Laxative Pills cured her of Sick Headache, from which she had suffered for a year."

No One Stopped the Stage.
The morning after the assassination of President Lincoln the telegraph operator of a small town in Ohio read a passing dispatch which conveyed the sorrowful information to him. This speedily spread through the surrounding country, and at 11 o'clock, when the mail train was due, nearly 100 men had congregated to buy a morning paper.

As a matter of course not a single paper remained, and all were in despair, until some one remembered that the postmaster was a regular subscriber, and that the mail bag must contain a morning newspaper addressed to him.

The coveted paper found, the aged postmaster proceeded to read to the people who had crowded into the long store the details of the crime in the capital of the world.

The voice of the reader faltered more than once as he read the account, now so familiar to all Americans. Finally he reached the point where it was said of Booth that he "strikes out 'St. Semper tyrannus,' leaped on the stage and made his escape."

Throwing his old pipe hat upon the floor, the man lifted his hand and shouted:

"Good gracious! Why didn't somebody have sense enough to stop the stage!"—Chicago Chronicle.

The Innocence of Childhood.
As the four de force of an entertainment once given at an English country house it was arranged that the children should present an original play, to be entirely written and acted by themselves. The play turned out to be surprisingly well written and would have won much praise but for the ending. This was the story of the play:

A gallant knight joined the brave King Richard in one of his crusades in Palestine. Nothing having been heard from him for more than seven years, the conviction was forced on his faithful wife that he was dead. The villain came to her and wanted her to marry him, but she refused. He then came to her and wanted her to marry him, but she refused. He then came to her and wanted her to marry him, but she refused.

"And I, too, my lord, have not been idle," she said with pride. "See! And here she led out before the electrified audience four lovely children to be presented for the first time to their father."—San Francisco Argonaut.
